Courtenay Veterinary Clinic Goes Digital

Courtenay, BC—Doctors Candice Hall and Tom Van Dyck of Courtenay Veterinary Clinic announced today that they are the first veterinary practice in the Valley to invest in digital radiography (X-rays) to diagnose clients' pets.

According to Dr. Hall, "Not only does the new equipment capture greater detail than film X-rays, but it allows us to easily email the radiographs to specialists around the world, who can immediately collaborate with us for treatment protocols in unusual cases including cardiac care." As a result, CVC clients will not even have to leave the Valley to get even the most specialized care, thanks to this technology.

Dr. Hall adds that another significant advantage of going digital is the environmental impact, since there are no toxic developing chemicals or films. Prior to the digital radiography, CVC contracted with a service to recycle these environmentally hazardous products.

Courtenay Veterinary Clinic, conveniently located at 1380 Cliffe Avenue in the heart of Courtenay, offers a full range of veterinary care for dogs, cats and other small companion animals. In addition to caring for pets when they are sick or injured, CVC provide a full range of preventive and wellness care, including de-wormers and flea and tick prevention.
